The Construction Scene

'...next thing you know, they'll be wanting to move the river channel....'.

CONSTRUCTION totaling nearly $33 million and including three classroom buildings, two large housing complexes for students and a new airport currently is under way at Ohio University.

Aside from the University's building program, Athens and the surrounding areas are undergoing a transfiguration that includes construction of a giant highway thoroughfare system and the Herculean task of moving and redirecting the Hocking River.

According to Charles W. Reamer, managing editor of The Athens Messenger, "Athens is literally trembling under the weight of the heaviest construction program in its long history—a mammoth multi-project face-lifting—all of it being rushed toward completion in the next two years."

A city official at a meeting last spring forecast that "Athens is going to be a dust bowl for the next two years." Area residents agreed with his prediction at the end of the summer. Huge earthmovers had rumbled across the countryside all summer, accompanied by the din of air hammers and the clang of bulldozers and clams which gouged out giant chunks of earth and trees.

Most of the University projects are scheduled to be completed before spring 1970. The bulk of the construction is being financed through state-appropriated funds, federal building grants or bond sales.

The first of the classroom structures scheduled for completion will house the School of Music. The building is expected to be finished by November. The $2.7 million hillside construction on East Union Street was begun in December 1967.

The new music building is of brick and exposed concrete beam construction and it will contain classrooms, practice rooms, faculty office-studios, a music library and a small recital hall.

A future second construction phase of the building will eventually house another, larger auditorium for concerts and recitals.

The largest of the classroom facilities currently under construction on the Athens campus is the television and theater building on a College Street site between Baker Center and the Speech Building.

The $4.3 million dollar TV-theater project, under construction for almost two years, will be completed about January 1970.

The building will house educational radio, television and speech communication departments, and it will be the home of the University's broadcast outlets, WOUB-AM and FM and WOUB-TV.

Two large television production studios, radio broadcasting studios and studios for academic training as well as a media distribution center for closed circuit instructional broadcasts will be in the building.

The administrative offices of the College of Communication, the University Theater, classrooms and laboratories also will be housed in the new television and theater building.

The $2.8 million mathematics and science lecture hall is the third classroom building currently under construction and it is scheduled for completion in July 1970. The building is the first structure to be located on the 14 acres acquired through the South Green Urban Renewal Project which is to become the new science and engineering campus.

The five-story math and science building, located at the corner of East Mulberry and Van Vorhes streets, will contain classrooms, faculty offices and a lecture hall seating about 300. A second lecture hall will be added to the building later.

A 13-building apartment complex for married students will be completed in January 1970. Some 96 of the total of 192 units were opened for occupancy with the start of the 1969 fall quarter.

The $4.2 million project, known as the Mill Street Apartments, contains one and two-bedroom units and is located northeast of the main campus on the north side of Mill Street.

Several auxiliary buildings and parking areas for 238 automobiles are being constructed at the Mill

CAMPUS MUSICIANS will be in their new home shortly after the first of the year if construction stays on schedule. The new $2.7 million School of Music building is located on a hillside between East Union Street and Seigfried Hall. In addition to classrooms, practice rooms and faculty office-studios, the structure also will house a library and a small recital hall. Formal dedication ceremonies for the new building are planned for the spring.

Street site. A number of the ground floor apartments will accommodate the special needs of handicapped students, and courtyards and play areas are being planned for children. All of the buildings in the complex will be blended together by landscaped and paved malls.

The South Green residence hall complex, scheduled for completion by September 1970, is the largest single construction project ever undertaken at Ohio University. The 15-building complex will house 1,734 students.

The five-story buildings incorporate the suite concept in interior design and will be the first residence halls on the campus with that feature. The concept involves bedroom clusters opening off of formal and informal lounges and study areas.

The $17 million project is being built in the Georgian architectural style similar to the University's East Green and West Green residential complexes. All of the buildings are being connected by elevated walkways which will permit access during spring floods.

The residence hall complex spreads over 17.9 acres on the site of what was the University's golf course. A new golf course is planned near the University's new airport near Albany.

The first phase in the construction of the new airport just off U.S. Highway 50 near Albany has been under way since May. The 4,200-foot runway with its accompanying taxiway and parking facilities is expected to be in operation between the spring and fall of 1970.

The cost of the first phase is $890,216, including land acquisition, engineering and administrative expenses.

The University has made application to the Federal Aviation Agency for additional funding to lengthen the runway to 6,000 feet, giving the airport the capability for handling executive jets and, eventually, commercial airline service.

No University funds are involved in the airport project. Half of the cost is provided through an FAA grant with the remainder coming from the state and Appalachian Regional Commission funds.

The site of approximately 700 acres is a ten-minute drive from the campus and is located adjacent to a portion of the four-lane Appalachian Highway now under construction. The east-west route will connect Cincinnati and the Belpre-Parkersburg area when it is completed.

Other capital improvements the University will begin within the next several months include two academic facilities, an animal research building, a botanical research building and centralized food service and laundry structures.

Still in the early phases of what is estimated to be a two-year project is the $10 million Athens flood protection plan involving the relocation and widening of the Hocking River.

Designed by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers for the Hocking Conservancy District, the project covers a 5.5 mile stretch of the river between White's Mill in west Athens and a point near the east corporation limits.

The relocated river channel will carry the stream out of the present flood plain occupied by University buildings.

Also in its beginning stages is the U.S. Route 33 East Bypass, a $6.3 million highway project which will form part of the $20 million thoroughfare system mapped for Athens by the state.

Crews are at work clearing rugged terrain in the northern, hilly section of Athens, from which the highway will emerge into east Athens to link up with an already programmed segment of the proposed Appalachian Highway. Another section of the Appalachian Highway, now under construction west of Athens, is a $1.5 million job that stops just short of the next highway connection.

THE NEW MATHEMATICS AND SCIENCE lecture hall, the first structure to be located on the 14 acres acquired through the South Green Urban Renewal Project, will cost $2.8 million. The five-story building, part of what will be the new science and engineering campus, will be completed in July 1970. The building will house classrooms, offices and a 300-seat lecture hall. A second lecture hall will be added later in a second construction phase.

Midway between the two highway projects are two other Athens jobs, one already under way and the other being readied for bidding. A new bridge is being erected on Richland Avenue to span the relocated river channel, and another new bridge will extend Stimson Avenue toward a hookup with the thoroughfare system.

The scheduling of all these projects is being timed to coincide with the completion of the next Appalachian Highway segment in 1971.

Another major construction project nearing completion for expected occupancy late this year is a new $4.5 million, 125-bed hospital in west Athens, near the new channel of the Hocking River.

Named the Charles G. O'Bleness

Memorial Sheltering Arms Hospital in tribute to its principal benefactor, the late Charles G. O'Bleness, '98, the facility is planned as a core unit for a proposed regional health center.

Also under way is a $1 million parking garage in downtown Athens, a structure that is expected to relieve the parking problems that have beset the city and the University for several years. The seven-floor garage (two of them underground) will accommodate some 380 cars when it is completed late in 1969.

Further contributing to the development of the area is the Margaret Creek Conservancy District with a $3 million program that includes six dams and lakes for flood control, recreation and water supply.

Students, Faculty and Alumni:

The University Community . . . Side

by Jack G. Ellis, '57, Director of Development

The University is woven into the fabric of my life. It is part of my heritage—it is part of my present being—and now is a concrete part of my future." These words—spoken by the late Charles G. O'Bleness, Class of 1898, as he announced his gift that established the first endowed professorship at Ohio University—articulated a feeling which has prompted many other alumni to assist the University in a variety of ways, big and small.

His expression is at the heart of a relationship that begins the day a freshman walks through the main gate of the campus and remains with him long after he departs from one of the college greens. The relationship between the student and the faculty while he is in school and the continuing relationship between him and others after he leaves complete a long-range composition of a University community.

That composition, often weakly defined and strongly misunderstood, is nevertheless the major force in the development of higher education and its subsequent influence upon the nation's pattern of living, as many have come to know it.

To strengthen the awareness of the University's essential composition, particularly as it involves faculty, students and alumni, the theme adopted for the 1969-70 Annual Giving Campaign is The University Community . . . Side by Side.

Through this theme, the importance of each of these forces in the University community will not only become apparent, but also will more fully illustrate the relationship of one part of the community to the other. The theme will further help to re-emphasize the need for full participation of each of the segments if the University is to continue its successful pursuit of educational excellence.

You as an alumnus will be especially interested in the interrelationships reflected by this theme, as they will provide you with a perspective that will enable you to see yourself as a vital part of the University. Communications with you during the year also will help explain how your actions can have a great influence on the University community.

Many of you who have a chance to visit the campus today will find that in the past two decades the University has grown dramatically, and yet, because of the way the expanded campus has been organized into smaller units of "greens," much of the same warmth and friendliness you experienced has been retained. In the process of growth—both physically and academically—your Alma Mater has emerged from southeastern Ohio as a truly major center of higher learning, influencing considerable progress in many fields of endeavor throughout the state, the region, the nation and parts of the international scene. The University has become a significant educational leader without sacrificing its goal of freedom in the adventure of truth and knowledge.

It would surprise no one associated with the growth here if you were confused over the extraordinary increase of new buildings, the impressive additions to the faculty and the enlarged role of student interest, the scope of which has led to challenges unheard in the past.

by Side

It's because of all these changes since you were an undergraduate that the University wants to explore with you the important and significant advances that have been made . . . are being made . . . and will continue to be made.

You will be proud to know about the faculty and student personalities who are shaping and molding the destiny of Ohio University. You will be interested in the nature of their work and in why they have chosen Ohio University as the institution in which to do that work. And you will be delighted to recognize alumni, such as yourself, who in the course of their own livelihood, find it important, honorable and satisfying to reinvest their time, energy and finances in Ohio University.

As the University advances toward a new era under the leadership of President Claude R. Sowle, your support will become even more significant. The philosophy and rationale for your assistance will be defined through special mailings about the faculty, alumni and students. Through these communications, you will become acquainted with outstanding members of the faculty who by virtue of their talents and accomplishments have brought immense credit to your University.

The student body—representing 50 foreign countries, all the states in the nation and every county in Ohio—is another group you'll enjoy meeting. You'll be proud to learn why they chose Ohio, which goals they have selected and what motivations drive them. Answers to questions such as these partly explain why nearly 1,000 members of last year's senior class worked to raise $65,000 among themselves to further support the University—even before they became alumni and before they became employed.

Your role and the role of your fellow alumni are equally noteworthy. Because Ohio is a state-supported university, only one-third of the budget is received from allocations of the state legislature. Yet 3,490 alumni contributed $218,569 last year to further support programs in the areas of research, library acquisitions and student financial aid—support that was vitally needed, but not available except for the generosity and confidence expressed by the alumni. Many of these alumni you will read about. As you learn of their personal reasons for action, we hope you will be inspired to demonstrate similar support. With the national average of nearly 20 percent alumni participation in the financial support of state-assisted universities, it is our hope that out of 40,000 alumni, financial assistance—both large and small—will be received from 8,000 alumni during 1969-70. Optimism in the strong faith of alumni concern for progress at Ohio University convinces us that alumni will respond to the challenge.

This will be our story . . . our mission . . . our goal. As you receive our messages, we hope you will be brought more closely into the University community, not merely as a silhouette, but as an alumnus with an objective clearly defined, a mind well-informed, and a heart fully benevolent toward action.

Let this be the year to reweave the University into the fabric of your life . . . to accept your heritage both past and present . . . and to make the University a concrete part of your future—Side by Side.

TEAMWORK APPROACH

Recent major changes in the organizational structure at Ohio University are based on what President Claude R. Sowle calls a "teamwork" approach to administration.

Sowle was handed an excellent opportunity to restructure the top administrative posts last summer when Provost Thomas S. Smith and Executive Vice President James Whalen resigned to accept the presidencies of private institutions. Under the new structure, the position of provost has been retained but redefined and the executive vice president's post has been discontinued.

Heading the list of Sowle's top administrative officers is Dr. Robert L. Savage, who was named provost. Dr. Savage functions as the chief assistant to the president, with general responsibility for coordinating and supervising the wide-ranging, day-to-day affairs of the University.

Dr. Taylor Culbert, vice president and dean of faculties, and Dr. Richard C. Dorf, vice president for educational services, report to the provost. Under the Alden administration, the provost, serving as chief academic officer, and the executive vice president, heading business and student affairs, in effect held parallel positions in the University's hierarchy and reported directly to the president.

Provost Savage, who joined the University in 1964 and later became dean of the College of Engineering and Technology, was vice president for research and industrial liaison before assuming his most recent post.

As vice president and dean of faculties, Dr. Culbert is the chief academic officer of the University. At the present time he is also continuing as graduate dean and president of the Ohio University Press. Vice President Culbert was a member of the English faculty from 1953 to 1964 when he became associate dean of the University's Graduate College. He was named dean one year later.

In assuming the new post of vice president for educational services, Dr. Dorf is responsible for the areas of student activities, resident programs and student services. Dr. Dorf came to Ohio University last summer from the University of Santa Clara where he was chairman of the electrical engineering department. He had spent the past year as an American Council on Education Fellow, serving at the University of California at Berkeley on a number of special assignments, including student affairs.

Originally Dr. Dorf was named dean of the College of Engineering and Technology, but he was transferred to his present vice presidential post when it was created last summer. President Sowle pointed out that the new position underscores the University's belief that both the academic programs and the educational services at the University are integral and undivided parts of the student's total educational experience.

As part of his teamwork approach, the president meets weekly with his top administrators and attends the regular Faculty Senate meetings to make announcements and answer questions. Sowle also schedules weekly sessions with the press.

Others assuming top posts at the University include Dr. Beaumont Davison, who replaces Dr. Dorf as dean of the College of Engineering and Technology. Dr. Davison had been chairman of the electrical engineering department at Ohio.

Dr. Edward Penson, formerly the assistant provost, was promoted to associate dean of faculties, and Dr. William J. Holmes, a member of the University's English faculty before his appointment as an American Council on Education Fellow last year, now serves as assistant to the president with responsibility for a variety of special staff assignments.

In other changes, President Sowle has initiated a new staff policy, which states that positions involving contract administrative personnel and classified personnel, both clerical and service, which are now vacant or which become vacant will not be filled automatically. Exceptions to the new policy will be made only when it is demonstrated that failure to fill a vacancy would impair the effective function of the unit involved.

The new policy was initiated in conjunction with President Sowle's plan to establish University task forces to review and evaluate different areas of University policy. (See story on new advisory council.)

ENROLLMENT CLIMBS

Enrollment continues to climb at Ohio University with the number of students on all campuses this fall expected to total 22,900, an increase of about two percent over last year's total.

Exact registration figures are not expected until the end of September after all students are registered for fall quarter 1969.

On the main campus, a projected student body of 17,600 will include approximately 4,200 freshmen, 1,540 graduate students and 400 international students.

The number of freshmen entering the University on the main campus this year reflects a gradual leveling off of freshmen classes, as many students begin their university work at regional campuses.

More than 5,000 are expected at the University's campuses in Lancaster, Belmont County, Chillicothe, Portsmouth and Zanesville and at the University's special adult education facility at Lockbourne Air Force Base near Columbus. About 1,800 of the branch campus total represent new students.

NEW ADVISORY COUNCIL

President Claude R. Sowle has announced the creation of a President's Advisory Council to examine and discuss the significant questions affecting University development and to make recommendations on major policy decisions.

Prior to creating the council in August, President Sowle discussed the need for such a group with officers and members of the Faculty Senate; Alicia Woodson, student body president, and with senior administrative officers. In light of the formation of this council, the president has discontinued the University Executive Committee.

The council will consist of four faculty members recommended by the Faculty Senate, two undergraduate students recommended by Student Government, one graduate student recommended by the Graduate Student Advisory Council and four administrative officers appointed by the president. One of the administrative officers will be an academic dean nominated by the deans. President Sowle will be the chairman of the group.

In announcing the council, the president stated his belief that "mutual trust, understanding and cooperation among faculty members, students and administrators is the key to progress at Ohio University. Such teamwork is extremely important in the formulation of major policy decisions," he said.

Appointments to the council are expected to be made by the end of September.

Staff support for the council, which will meet weekly, will be provided by Dr. William J. Holmes, assistant to the president and staff director of the council, and Robert E. Mahn, secretary of the University who will serve as the council's secretary.

DR. MORGAN DIES

Dr. Joseph Wayland Morgan, who gave his collection of 1,200 books, pamphlets, photographs and periodicals on the history of science to the University in 1959, died last June in his Springfield home.

Dr. Morgan's gift to Ohio University is known as the Morgan Collection in the History of Sciences.

Before retiring in 1952, Dr. Morgan was a member of the Wittenberg University faculty for 25 years.

Photographs and publications produced in the Office of University Publications have won a total of 18 awards in national and regional competitions this year.

Two issues of The Ohio Alumnus and a regional campus recruiting brochure received special citations in the national publications leadership competition of the American Public Relations Association in July.

The Alumnus magazines and the recruiting piece were cited for special merit and quality from among a record field of 1,184 entries submitted by colleges and universities from throughout the United States and Canada.

The winning issues of The Alumnus were the June-July issue dealing with today's students in a special feature entitled "Who Do They Think They Are?" and the March-April 1969 issue. The latter magazine contained an interview with three students on how Ohio finances higher education and a photo story on the move into the Alden Library.

The student feature in the June-July issue was written by Jan Kissner Cady, '65. The Alumnus is designed by Don F. Stout, '51, director of University publications.

Max A. Schaible, senior editor of University publications and editor of The Alumnus, accepted the awards in New York at the joint national conference of the ACPRRA and the American Alumni Council.

The 24-page booklet on the regional campuses, New Campuses of Ohio University, was designed by Gene Church, assistant designer in the Office of University Publications, and edited by Schaible.

The publications leadership competition is sponsored by ACPRRA each year to recognize outstanding examples of college and university publications. The 1969 competition marks the third consecutive year that Ohio University's publications have received special citations.

"Steel Painters," a black and white photograph by Harry Snavely, '51, chief photographer, won a 1969 honor award for outstanding photography from the University Photographers Association of America (see Eight creative achievement awards for graphics were awarded to Ohio University-produced publications by the Advertising Club of Huntington at the conclusion of its annual competition.

Other awards won during the year included six citations for excellence, five to published photographs and one to a single publication, from the ACPRRA Great Lakes District.

WOMEN'S HOURS

The Board of Trustees, acting on a recommendation from President Sowle, has lessened curfew restrictions on Ohio University coeds.

The board voted unanimously at

Ohio's New First Family

KATIE SOWLE, upper left, is a Wellesley alumna who met her husband when they were law students at Northwestern. (She was the top graduate in the class; he finished in second place.) At left, the family group in the garden of the president's home at 29 Park Place in Athens shows Leslie Ann, 10, seated in the foreground, Mrs. Sowle at its Sept. 5 meeting in Columbus to eliminate nightly curfews for sophomore women who have parental permission. This same policy already applies to junior and senior women and to coeds over 21.

The decision to liberalize the curfew policy came after mass defiance of women's hours last spring. One of last spring's mass walkouts saw more than 800 coeds, mostly freshmen and sophomores, congregate in Memorial Auditorium past their midnight curfew. Most women who took part in the walkouts were issued written reprimands from the University.

In his letter of recommendation to the women's hours committee three days before the trustees' meeting, President Sowle said he had "devoted a great deal of time and thought" to the issue and had based his recommendation on an extensive study. The letter said that by eliminating sophomore hours, Ohio University's policy would not be "inconsistent with (the policies) presently in effect at other state institutions in Ohio."

Ohio State, Miami, Central State and Cincinnati have a no hours policy for senior, junior and sophomore women over 21 or with parental permission. Kent State, Cleveland State, Wright State, Bowling Green

Since coming to Athens, he's become interested in astronomy, among other eight-year-old interests. Prior to Athens, the Soule children had lived in big cities—Chicago and Cincinnati—and their first month in Athens was a real adventure: they spent it on a farm while renovations were being made at the Park Place home. There were horses and a pond, and the farm life, their mother reports, provided a great contrast to what they've known. and Youngstown universities have a no hours policy for all coeds and, except for Bowling Green, parental permission is not required.

THIRD-TIME CHAMPS

The Ohio Bobcats, with a ten-game schedule this fall which includes such out-of-conference teams as Minnesota and Penn State, have been selected by the MAC News Media Assn. to capture the 1969 conference football championship.

With an opening 35-0 victory Sept. 20 in Athens over the Golden Flashers of Kent State, the Ohio team is already on its way to making the prediction come true.

Coach Bill Hess, commenting on his team's selection, said that this year's squad is dedicated to becoming the first in MAC history to win three successive grid titles.

In the poll of writers and broadcasters taken in mid-August, Ohio drew 205 points. Miami was second with 189, followed by a tie for third between Bowling Green and Toledo, 129; Western Michigan, 73, and Kent, 52. The Bobcats received 23 first place votes compared to Miami's 12. Bowling Green and Toledo received one each.

The prediction of the association members duplicated exactly the season's finish which was forecast a year ago.

Ohio's three key offensive performers returning from last year's 10-0 regular season and second straight MAC championship squad are quarterback Cleve Bryant, starting end Todd Snyder and tailback Dave LeVeck.

At the preseason press preview, Hess called Bryant "an All-American in every sense of the word—he's intelligent, a fine leader and has great rapport with his teammates." Kent's grid coach, Dave Puddington, said that Bryant was "incomparable; the best (quarterback) in the country."

Hess cited Snyder as "a great football player with a tremendous competitive attitude" and LeVeck for his "fine outside speed and his hard inside running."

The Bobcats' main problem, Hess admitted, is in the offensive line, which needs rebuilding. The defense, which Hess described as "good enough to win the MAC last year," admittedly needs improving and will be anchored around All-Conference linebacker Steve Robinson.

"If we can improve our defense even though our offense may not be quite as good, we think we can take it all again," the conference's coaching dean concluded.

MAC EXPANSION

Whether the Mid-American Conference expands from its present six-team membership rests currently in the hands of the athletic directors of the conference schools. The MAC was reduced from seven to six teams this past summer when Marshall University was dropped from the league's roster.

The conference constitution has a provision for ten teams, but it is highly unlikely that that many schools would ever be admitted, MAC Commissioner Bob James reports, since the NCAA allows member schools to play only ten football games a year (not counting bowl games).

Conference schools feel that to have a true football champion, each team in the league should play each other at least once each season. Consequently, to have a ten-member conference would mean nine league games and only one game with an out-of-conference school.

The athletic directors met in September to discuss the desirability of the MAC operating with only six teams. They will meet again in November to complete their report. Schools which have applied or discussed the possibility of joining the MAC are Northern Illinois and Ball State.

BOARD INCREASES FEES

The Board of Trustees voted Aug. 11 to increase instructional fees for all students from $150 to $160 per quarter, to increase the tuition surcharge for students from outside Ohio from $200 to $300 per quarter and to add $13 to board and room fees.

The need for the fee increases, according to John F. Milar, University treasurer, was "a direct result of rapidly rising costs and not-so-rapidly rising state support."

All other state universities in Ohio also increased their fees during the summer.

Since the fall quarter of 1967 required fees for all Ohio University students have been raised a total of $135. The increase was made in three jumps: $15 in early 1968, $90 last year and $30 this year.

In the same time span, total fees for non-Ohio students have jumped $540 ($120 in early 1968, $90 last year and $330 this year).

The education tax bill passed by the Ohio General Assembly in August will provide $2.27 billion in state appropriations for education during the biennium ending July 31, 1971. Of that amount, higher education will receive a $17+ million increase over the 1967-69 appropriations, an amount which state university administrators say is not enough to meet always mounting expenses.

The General Assembly's education bill also called for a reduction in out-of-state student subsidies amounting to nearly 50 percent. A move originating in the Ohio House of Representatives to eliminate subsidies to out-of-state students altogether after July 1, 1971, was defeated in the Senate.

Ohio University's share of the state funds for 1969-70 will amount to $18,190,000 for operating funds and approximately $6 million for construction. The operating funds and construction appropriations represent an 8.4 percent increase over the $16,774,000 state subsidy last year.

Milar said the 8.4 percent increase is "not nearly enough to meet our very substantial increases in costs."

The $10 raise in instructional fees, Milar said, is expected to bring in approximately $520,000, and the $100 addition to the surcharge for out-of-state students will add about $925,000 to the University's income.

The major increases in expenses for this year, according to Milar, will be the average six and one-half percent merit salary raises for faculty; statutory pay raises for all non-academic employees, which will cost at least a quarter of a million dollars; an increase in the University's share of the employees' retirement system; the opening of the new music and communication building, and funding of the new Alden library.

MEAD GIVES HOUSE

Officials of the Mead Corporation, Chillicothe Division, have presented the keys to their staff house to the University's Chillicothe campus.

The 14-room house will be used as a guest house for campus visitors, for University-community meetings, continuing education classes and other functions to be determined by University officials.

The staff house was presented to The Ohio University Fund, Inc., during a luncheon ceremony in July.

The house is the former residence of George Hunter Smith, a wealthy banker-financier.

LATIN AMERICAN STUDIES

Three University faculty members have returned from Latin America where they met with officials of the National University of Honduras to explore a cooperative Latin American studies program.

Ohio is considering an association with the Latin American university to further enhance the quality of its own Latin American studies program, which is being developed on campus within the Center for International Studies.

The program has been expanded during the past year to include more than 50 courses in Latin American history, political science, sociology-anthropology, literature, Spanish and Portuguese and a study abroad program at the University of Veracruz, Mexico.

Contemporary Latin American literature has been introduced as a permanent part of the offerings of the modern languages department, the staff of the studies program has been increased and the library has purchased specialized Latin American collections. In addition, Sergio Mondragon, an outstanding young Mexican poet, will be on campus this year as a visiting lecturer and Mundus Artium, the literary journal published by the Department of English, will devote its December issue to contemporary Latin American literature.

Dr. James Cunningham, chairman of the Latin American studies committee, who visited Honduras along with Dr. Edward Penson, associate dean of faculties, and Dr. Eric Wagner, executive secretary of the studies committee, reported he was very impressed and stimulated by the development plans which have been made by the Hondurans.

According to Dr. Cunningham, plans are being made for a visit to Athens by faculty from the National University of Honduras. He and other University officials are seeking cooperation from other universities who may be interested in a cooperative Latin American studies program.

ALUMNI REPORT

A 20-year-old former high school dropout has begun studies toward the PhD at Indiana University after completing five years of college work at Ohio University in 23 months.

Robert Arnold Mertzman of Dayton, who quit high school during his senior year for economic reasons, completed his master's degree in philosophy on the Athens campus in early September. He enrolled at Ohio less than two years ago after picking up his necessary high school credits at the Dayton Public Night School.

Mertzman, married and the father of a two-year-old child, says he moved through college at a fast pace because it was less expensive and because he felt more comfortable moving along at his own speed. He admits classroom work bores him.

He had begun his thesis for a master's degree by the end of his freshman year and moved from undergraduate to graduate status at the end of 81 credit hours of work.

Faculty members in the philosophy department and University administrators realized Mertzman's potential early and gave him encouragement and assistance in working out a special program. Normally, 180 credit hours are required for an undergraduate degree and qualification for graduate study, but advanced placement comprehensive examinations enabled Mertzman to receive academic credit for studies completed outside the classroom.

Dr. Warren Ruchti, the associate professor of philosophy who advised Mertzman during his thesis work, says the young scholar "displays marvelous quick insights into philosophical problems and has great capability and creative capacity to come up with alternative directions and solutions to those problems."

Mertzman '69 after picking up his necessary high school credits at the Dayton Public Night School.

Mertzman chose Indiana for his doctoral studies because of its program and philosophy faculty, although he also was accepted for PhD work, in many cases with fellowships involved, at the University of California at Berkeley, St. Louis University, Johns Hopkins, the University of Illinois and several other major universities. He is pursuing his studies at Indiana under a $4,000-a-year government fellowship.

Mertzman's ultimate goal is research with the possibility of "teaching a few seminars on the side," and if he continues the pace he set for himself at Ohio, he'll reach that goal very soon.

While at the University, he was director of Title I guidance projects for the Alexander School System for two years.

Mrs. Gaetano, whose undergraduate honors included membership in four campus honoraries, was a graduate assistant in elementary education while working toward her master's degree and an instructor in education while studying for the doctorate.

ALUMNI CLUB NEWS

by William K. Loftus, '58
Executive Director, Alumni Affairs

At Alumnus presstime, the following chapter activities had either taken place or were in the final planning stages:

Detroit alumni were hosts for a student - parent - alumni reception Aug. 26 to acquaint area students with each other and give them and their parents an opportunity to meet each other and to talk with University personnel. Dr. Jerrold Griffis, dean of residence life, and Mrs. Judith Babcock, assistant director of student activities, accompanied me.

The Mothers' Club of Greater Cleveland staged a special program Sept. 11 for new students with the assistance of Dave Scott, '59, MEd '60, assistant alumni director. Mrs. J. J. Holecek of Lakewood handled the arrangements and Ohio upperclassmen presented a skit on campus life. Alan Weber, '70, was master of ceremonies. University panelists included John O'Neal, dean of registration and admissions; Dr. Jerrold Griffis, dean of residence life; Fred Cluff, director of student loans; Robert E. Guinn, director of security; Dr. Dale E. Mattmiller, director of Hudson Health Center, and Margaret Deppen, director of student activities.

The Pittsburgh chapter staged its annual summer picnic Saturday, Sept. 6. Pittsburgh alumni also are planning to charter busses for the Ohio-Penn State game Oct. 25 at State College.

Chapters in Rochester and Buffalo, N.Y., launched a one-two punch in mid-September. The Rochester group held a dinner reception for President and Mrs. Claude R. Sowle Sept. 12, and the following evening the Buffalo alumni were hosts to the Sowles at an alumni-parent-student reception. The two evenings provided an excellent opportunity to meet President and Mrs. Sowle. The Rochester chapter is planning a chartered bus excursion to the Ohio-Penn State game Oct. 25.

The Greater Cincinnati club will hold a stag night Sept. 18 to show movies of the Tangerine Bowl game. Head basketball coach Jim Snyder, '41, will join Dave Scott and me to talk about the Tangerine Bowl (Jim's son Todd had an 89-yard kickoff return in the game) and about the prospects of the 1969-70 basketball team. We're hoping that Bengal assistant coach, Ohio alum and former Cleveland Brown linebacker Vince Costello, '53, also will be on hand.

The Youngstown Mothers' Club, one of our more active parents' groups, will have its first meeting of the new year Sept. 24. The Youngstown club, in working with other area organizations, helps create a real sense of community among students, parents, faculty and administrators.

Members of the Minneapolis-St. Paul chapter will be hosts at functions before and after the Ohio-Minnesota game Sept. 27, and alumni are expected from throughout the Minnesota-Wisconsin area for the Bobcats' first away game against the Golden Gophers. The Green and White Club has chartered a jet from Columbus, and 80 Athens and Columbus-area alumni will join the Minnesota and Wisconsin alumnae for the pregame luncheon, bus transportation to and from the game and for the postgame mixer. President and Mrs. Sowle will be there (and at most of the other away games) to meet as many alumni as possible during the Sowles' first year.

Listed below are some dates for area alumni to keep in mind:

Oct. 18—Pregame luncheon, bus transportation to and from game and postgame mixer, Ohio vs. Miami at Oxford.

Oct. 25—Bus to and from game and postgame mixer, Ohio vs. Penn State at State College.

Oct. 26—Alumni reception in Boston, Mass.

Oct. 31-Nov. 2—Journalism homecoming in Athens. Numerous activities surrounding the Ohio-

Western Michigan game Saturday, Nov. 1, will be sponsored by the School of Journalism and the College of Communication. Journalism alumni should write to the school if they have not received mailings about the weekend.

Nov. 14-16—Silver anniversary reunion for the Class of 1944 in connection with the Ohio-Cincinnati game Saturday, Nov. 15.

Nov. 22—Pregame luncheon, busses to and from the game and postgame mixer, Ohio vs. Marshall at Huntington, W. Va.

Dec. 6—Ohio's basketball Bobcats will take on Rick Mount and the Purdue Boilermakers in the new Convocation Center in Athens.

Dec. 13—Luncheon, busses and mixer in Columbus when Ohio and Ohio State tangle in basketball.

Dec. 26-30—Alumni tour to Florida in conjunction with the Hurricane Classic (Ohio, Seton Hall, Texas and Miami, Fla.); hopefully, we'll be able to tie in a side trip to Orlando to watch the Bobcats in the Tangerine Bowl.

The Cincinnati and Indianapolis chapters will be working with the University admissions office this year to step up recruiting efforts in those areas, and other chapters are planning full schedules of meetings and other activities.

As you can see, it looks like a pretty good year. Plans are in the mill to get President and Mrs. Sowle to Indianapolis Jan. 24, to Wisconsin Jan. 31, to Akron/Canton March 7 and to Los Angeles on May 16. I certainly hope we'll be seeing you at one or more of these functions.

If you're interested in a sun-filled, fun-filled spring vacation in 1970, consider the Alumni Association tour to the Bahamas the week of March 21-28. Additional information on the tour appears elsewhere in this issue of the Alumnus.

If you'd like further information about chapter activities in your area or have any questions about any of the events above, please write to me at 106 Davis Hall, Athens, Ohio 45701 or call (614) 594-5128.

The Nostalgia Corner

40th Anniversary Reunion Brings 1929 Champs Back to Campus

Long-time Bobcat watchers still recount the glories of the 1929 football season when the Ohio University team scored 309 points to their opponents' 13 in a nine-game, undefeated season.

Members of the 1929 Buckeye Athletic Association championship team returned to Athens the third weekend in September from as far away as New Mexico and New York to celebrate the 40th anniversary of their victorious season.

The '29 Bobcats opened the season with an impressive 18-0 victory over Indiana University. Also scoreless in their encounters with the Bobcats were West Liberty (26-0), Muskingum (59-0), Cincinnati (35-0), Miami (14-0), Denison (54-0) and Marietta (45-0). Ohio Wesleyan scored seven points to Ohio's 21, and Wittenberg scored six to the Bobcats' 33.

The turnout for this fall's reunion was impressive: 28 members of the team showed up for the reunion as did the team's coach, Don Peden of Bloomington, Ill.; the assistant coach, B. T. "Butch" Grover, '19, and the team's physician, Dr. Blaine Goldsberry, '14, both of Athens.

The teammates and their wives began arriving in Athens Friday evening for registration and an opening party at the University Inn, according to spokesman and team member Kermit Blosser, '32, Bobcat golf coach.

Following a Saturday morning tour of the campus and a special luncheon at the Inn, the '29ers attended the Ohio-Kent State game in Peden Stadium, where they were introduced and given special recognition at half time.

Capping the reunion weekend was a cocktail party and dinner Saturday night at the Athens Country Club, presided over by team captain John Brammer, '30, of Zanesville and attended by more than 150. The guests included President and Mrs. Claude R. Sowle; the entire Bobcat football coaching staff; Mrs. Thor Olson, widow of the team's trainer; former faculty members Roy Paynter, '22, Stow; William Fenzel, '18, and Ralph "Sid" Beckert, '27, Athens; Grosvenor McKee, '16, Meadville, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Paul O'Brien, '32, Athens, and many others.

Seven of the men who attended the reunion—Peden, Grover, Goldsberry, Blosser, Brammer, Claude Chrisman, '32, of Logan, and Jerome Warshower, '32, of Brooklyn, N.Y.—are members of the University's athletic Hall of Fame.

Your String Getting a Little Raggedy?

Remember? You put it there to remind you to order your class ring. Okay, so you've gotten accustomed to the string. That's no reason to put off ordering your ring—you can always wear the string on another finger to remind you of something else. The rings, produced for Ohio University by Josten's, are 10K yellow gold (white gold's $5 extra) and you may choose your birthstone or black onyx to set your ring apart.

The "class side" shows the University seal, the Ohio Bobcat and your year. The other side features Galbreath Chapel and your degree. The man's ring costs $38.50 for the open back; $42.80 for the plastic-closed back, and $47.15 for the deluxe, gold-closed back. Ladies' miniature rings will cost you $34.20 for the open back and $37.35 for the deluxe model. Greek letter encrusting is $3 for two letters or $5 for three.

If your string's getting raggedy, write today to The Ohio Alumnus, 202 Davis Hall, Athens, Ohio 45701, and we'll send you details and an order blank. Tie a string around your finger to help you remember.

back on Sheila Featheringay is ~~off~~ her rocker...

Photography by Don F. Stout, '51

Miss Featheringay is not an Ohio alumna (she's taken courses willy-nilly at Newark College of Engineering and University of Houston), but she happened to see the chair and rocker ad in the last Ohio Alumnus (she was having her teeth cleaned and noticed the magazine on the coffee table in her dentist's office). She was so captivated she sent her rocker order in that very day. (Funny thing: her dentist isn't an Ohio grad, either; he swiped the magazine from his lawyer's reception room.) In any case, Miss Featheringay is so pleased with her rocker she's planning to order the three matching chairs . . . as soon as she gets her dentist paid off. If you'd like to follow suit, you can order the rocker for $34.84; the lady's chair or the side chair for $27.04; or the armchair (with cherry arms) for $44.72. (If you live in Ohio, add four per cent sales tax.)

Make your check payable to the Ohio University Alumni Association and send it to The Ohio Alumnus, 202 Davis Hall, Athens, Ohio 45701. Your chair or rocker will be shipped to you express collect. (And by the way, the next time you visit your dentist, check out his reading matter. He may be a fellow alumnus . . . and then again, he may be only a sneak thief.)

like to be on ~~off~~ your rocker?
